A Firsthand Account of Courage, Sacrifice, and Resilience

On October 23, 1983, a suicide bomber drove a truck filled with explosives into the U.S. Marine barracks in Beirut, Lebanon, killing 241 American servicemen and wounding hundreds more. In the aftermath of this horrific attack, Lieutenant Colonel Oliver L. North, a decorated Marine commander, stepped forward to lead the survivors and investigate the tragedy.

In his gripping memoir, Beirut 1983: The Marine Commander Tells His Story, North provides a firsthand account of the harrowing events that unfolded that fateful day. He recounts the heroic efforts of his Marines, who fought valiantly against overwhelming odds, and the heartbreaking loss of so many young lives.

North's memoir is not only a gripping historical account but also a powerful testament to the resilience of the human spirit. In the face of unimaginable tragedy, he and his Marines found strength in their unwavering bonds of camaraderie and their unwavering commitment to duty.
