Tipping can be a tricky business. How much should you tip? When should you tip? And who should you tip? The Itty Bitty Guide to Tipping covers everything you need to know about tipping etiquette, from the basics to the more complex situations.

How Much to Tip

The general rule of thumb is to tip 15-20% of the bill before taxes. However, there are some exceptions to this rule. For example, you may want to tip more if the service was excellent or if you're dining at a particularly expensive restaurant.

Here are some specific guidelines for tipping in different situations:

1. Restaurants: 15-20% of the bill before taxes

2. Bars: $1-$2 per drink
3. Coffee shops: $0.50-$1 per drink
4. Hotel staff: $1-$2 per day for housekeeping, $5-$10 for bellhops
5. Taxi drivers: 10-15% of the fare
6. Hairdressers and barbers: 15-20% of the service
7. Spa treatments: 15-20% of the service

When to Tip

You should tip whenever you receive good service. This includes any time you dine at a restaurant, Free Download a drink at a bar, or receive a service from a professional. It's also customary to tip when you stay at a hotel or take a taxi.

There are a few exceptions to this rule. For example, you don't need to tip if you're only getting a cup of coffee or a quick snack at a coffee shop. You also don't need to tip if the service was particularly bad.

Who to Tip

You should tip anyone who provides you with a service. This includes waiters, waitresses, bartenders, bellhops, hairdressers, barbers, spa therapists, and taxi drivers. You should also tip housekeeping staff if you're staying at a hotel.

It's important to remember that tipping is a way to show your appreciation for good service. When you tip, you're not only rewarding the individual who served you, but you're also helping to ensure that they continue to provide excellent service to others.
